Dillistone Group launches OpenAI powered Interview Simulation Platform

Dillistone, the AIM quoted supplier of software for the international recruitment industry, announces the launch of its innovative AI-driven Interview Simulation service, available to subscribers of the Group's B2C brand "GatedTalent".

The groundbreaking service leverages cutting-edge artificial intelligence, including OpenAI's GPT-4 and Whisper technologies, to deliver an interactive and highly personalised candidate interview preparation experience.

The service allows candidates to upload their CVs and job specifications directly to the platform. Using AI, the candidate receives realistic, speech-based interviews through dynamic, conversational exchanges.

The system:

- asks tailored interview questions,
- listens to responses via microphone input, and
- provides follow-up questions as appropriate, mirroring the flow of a genuine professional interview.

Upon completion, candidates receive detailed, actionable feedback to refine their performance and enhance their readiness for real-world opportunities.

Commenting on the launch, Jason Starr, CEO of Dillistone Group Plc, said:

"This launch represents a transformative step forward in talent preparation and recruitment technology. Our AI Interview Simulation service empowers candidates to practice and improve their skills in an environment that mirrors the challenges of real interviews, all while harnessing the latest advancements in AI and natural language processing. By investing in this technology, we continue to help individuals unlock their potential and provide companies with better-prepared candidates, driving success for all stakeholders in the hiring process."
