Idox Secures €2.8 Million Five-Year Contract to Provide Election Services in Malta

Idox, a leading supplier of specialist information management software and geospatial data solutions announces the award of a new €2.8 Million, five-year contract to deliver election services in Malta. This partnership, effective immediately and running through December 2029, reinforces our ongoing commitment to supporting Malta's democratic processes.

Under this renewed agreement, Idox will continue to provide essential services for all elections in Malta, including the next general election scheduled for 2027. This contract extension offers opportunities for further developments to the eCounting solution in the coming years to enable the efficient and secure management of elections. This builds on the company's successful delivery of all Elections since 2019.

David Meaden, Chief Executive Officer said:

"We are delighted to extend our partnership with the Maltese government to support their elections over the next five years."

"Our innovative solutions and proven track record underscore our commitment to ensuring transparent, secure, and seamless electoral processes. We look forward to enhancing the voter experience and strengthening democratic engagement in Malta."

A spokesperson from the Electoral Commission of Malta said:

"The Electoral Commission of Malta welcomes the renewal of our partnership with Idox through a new five-year agreement to support the delivery of elections and referenda in Malta. This collaboration has been instrumental in strengthening the efficiency, transparency, and security of our electoral processes since 2019, and we look forward to further advancing these goals under this new contract."

Idox has been a trusted partner in Malta's electoral system, leveraging innovative technology and expert services to ensure accuracy, efficiency, and integrity in every aspect of the electoral process. We aim to empower Maltese citizens by facilitating broader participation in national decision-making.

The five-year contract underscores the Electoral Commission of Malta's confidence in Idox's ability to deliver reliable and innovative election solutions.
