All resolutions were passed unanimously on a show of hands.

The Company's Corporate Governance statement requires the Company to state any actions to be taken as a result of resolutions for which votes against have been received from at least 20 per cent of independent votes.

For so long as the Company is not income generating on a regular basis, the passing of resolutions 4 and 5 is considered a necessity for the Company to continue as a going concern and in order to continue to fund its core business of minerals exploration and development which is high risk, but which has the potential to add high value when successful.

Resolution 4 is a general shareholder authority to issue new shares. The Company is unable to issue any new shares without such a shareholder authority. The authority is, however, passed and is previous any new shares without such a shareholder authority. The authority is, however, capped and in previous years it is rare that the authority is used in full.

The Directors will continue to balance the use of the facility with their duty to ensure that the Company is able to continue as a going concern and to ensure that the Company's business can be advanced. It will also continue to consider opportunities to generate income and offset its own expenditure through joint ventures arrangements with other companies. In 2024, over US 2.5 million was spent by third-party partners on the Company's projects and a high level of partner expenditure is anticipated in 2025.

Resolution 5 allows the Company to carry out fundraisings other than through a rights issue to all shareholders. As with Resolution 4, this is never a popular resolution, but rights issues can be prohibitively expensive, particularly for smaller fundraises, and they tend to have a low level of success when the share price is volatile. Furthermore, many shareholders hold their shares in broker nominee accounts which complicates their participation in rights issues.

In the past, the Company has provided a facility for shareholders to participate in fundraising alongside and on the same terms as a share placing, through their broker (a "Broker Option"). However, shareholder take up was low.

In future, and importantly, provided sufficient demand is communicated to the Company from shareholders, the Company will consider incorporating a Broker Option into any future fundraising.

The Company is keen to maintain an active dialogue with shareholders to ensure that concerns around any future fundraising are addressed.
