Tower Resources Chairman & CEO, Jeremy Asher, commented:

"The government in Cameroon is getting back to work following the recent Presidential election, which resulted in a historic eighth term in office for President Paul Biya, who has already indicated his support for our Thali project, with our Managing Director in Cameroon attending his recent inauguration. I will be visiting Cameroon again this week to oversee the progress on our documentation, and to hear at first hand the government's plans to stimulate further investment in our sector. In the meantime, our brokers have advised us over the past couple of weeks of further demand from investors following on from the small subscription we undertook last month. In the circumstances, we felt it was prudent to accept these further funds and bolster our working capital position as we move forward with our various work programmes."
